Clash of clans th4 builder base

There are so many different attack strategies that you can use once you reach the Builder Hall 4 and here are some of the best you can use to dominate the manufacturer's base as BH4! Use boxer giants, subdole archers, beta minions, infuriated barbarians and bombers to win all the time as Builder Hall 4. Giant strategy Archer BH4 personally, I find that the Giant-Archer strategy often functions the Best at Builder Hall 4. This is the basic principle of having a tank in front of taking all the damage, while there are archers behind doing distance damage. Here is the composition of the army you should attack when using the Giant-Sneaky Archer Attack Combo: Now that you know what to attack, that's how you should go using this combination! First of all, as mentioned above, you want to have your giants in front, so that they can absorb damage from all defenses. Keep in mind that the boxer giants have a terrible AI and will go towards the opening in the walls if there is one. Plant your giant accordingly so that you attack the defense you want it to attack. Tip: This strategy works better if you avoid the crusher ... try to attack on the opposite side like the crusher! After playing all six of your giants, it starts to deposit in your archers behind. If there are buildings that cannot be achieved by the defenses, play an archer to spot it for some percentage points more. In addition to that, all your archers should get behind your giants to start getting those percentage points. After you put all your troops, you can't really do anything besides watching the raid. As long as your giants stay ahead and avoid the crusher, you should be able to be able to be able to two stars plus bh4s! Beta Minions BH4 Strategy Beside, we have a rather fun strategy that deals with precision Beta Minions that needs to clear a fellow Builder Hall 4. This attack strategy is very similar to precision pigs in the village of home. Clearly, you want to have all the good improvements for this, as it relies on a pure air attack. So first, you have to drop your beta minion to start the precision part of this attack. The best thing about betas is that their first 4 attacks come from an extremely long radius, allowing you to break down weak buildings without the betas the servants being killed. At this stage of the attack, you will want to play your minions well out of base to choose external structures, giving you a lot of percentage points at the beginning of the battle without even losing a trump. Once your best beta minions start polishing out of the base, you'll want to go strong with the rest of your best minions as support. Ideally, you want to remove the nearest firecrackers in a way you can run the base and hurry the bh to reach the two stars. When your minions are made outside, all your attention should be the withdrawal of the builder's room. the rest of the percentage points will come! theThe point of this BH4 attack strategy is that it is fundamentally guaranteed a 1 star, but sometimes the 2-star is difficult to reach. Everything reduces what you're going to an attack. If your base for the more has no two recited, the Beta Minion strategy at Builder Hall 4 is the way to you to go. BARCH BH4 Strategy Barch is probably the riskier strategy to stick with the Builder Hall 4, but it can be rather rewarding if you can avoid the oil mill and not getting hit by mines or mega mines. If you can do it, Barch can devastate a base and leave it in a wrong way. For the composition of the army, you want to divide your space between barbarians and archers. So in this attack strategy, your barbarians will act like your sealing unit, but they can also do a lot of damage to the base, especially in the first two seconds when they are angry! Just like with the giant-archer strategy, you want to keep your attack away from the crusher, while the barbarians will be a shot from the scary beast. Also, be tired of spaces in the base, since the most likely the mines of the house that can decimate your attack. I originally attack from a point where you can easily reach the BH and has a group of strictly packed buildings. When your tank is down, it's time for support troops! Just like in the village of the house, you want to put your archers behind your barbaries to make damage to the same buildings as the barbs. This will allow buildings to fall quickly and make you progress in the base more quickly than yours. Make sure your archers didn't reason about your barbarians; If a mine hits you, he pulled out both units. Together, the archers and barbarians will quickly eat through the defenses of the single target. Thus, while Barch is an extremely risky strategy to use at Builder Hall 4, it can really be payable to stay away from splash damage. Whatever you do, not attack a BH5 with BARCH, since the multi-mortar will dominate you. However, I have three receded most of the time with Barch, demonstrating that it is a strong strategy with a little luck involved. Finally, the Bomber Bomber BH4 strategy, we have a strategy that combines the two troops with the worst at the absolute clash, the giant and the bomber. These two troops are very stupid, but if you take them where you want them to go, they can be devastating on a base. Here is the composition of the army you want to use for the strategy of the giant bomber at the Builder Hall 4! So, just like every giant composition of the army in the foreground, the Giants will first go to distract the defenses from the shooting. These giants will be able to take a lot of damage, but as always, make sure they don't go anywhere near the What the giants do and hopefully, remove some defenses. Attentive with boarding! Now it's his time for the bombers who is honestly, the scary part. The bombers are attracted to walls, which should mean that they destroy walls in compartments. However, the bomber AI is ugly ugly It will destroy the random walls that are not purpose. First of all, this is good so you can open a path to your giants in the base. But after they don't want more destroyed walls, bombers often still destroy walls. However, they do a lot of damage to buildings when they are not attracted to a wall, allowing you to quickly run a base, as long as you are in the middle. So this is the most scary attack strategy to use at Builder Hall 4, but once you master the bomber, this strategy can make two stars fundamentally any base in clan clash. Don't be too frustrated if you can't start! So this will win for our Strategy Guide of Builder Hall 4 in clan clash! I hope you guys can dominate the game now with some striker strength.
