Buying an Android TV box can be disconcerting. It is likely that you have ended up here because you know what is an Android TV box and either some buying advice to a or you have been warned by others that an Android TV box is a solution for your streaming problems, but you have no real idea of what that means. If it is a senseless the last, we have a few news: no one really knows what an Android TV box. Therefore, no one generally accepts the definition of what constitutes one of these streaming boxes and many don't even run Android TV. Confused? You should be: the Android TV box market is a confusing place. However, with our guide, you can safely navigate on your way to the right Android TV box for you. Best Android TV Boxes: At a glance How to choose the best Android TV box for you What is an Android TV box? An Android TV box is a small set-top box, roughly the size of Apple TV, running both Google's Android TV software or the manufacturer's most often a reworked version of Android standard. In theory, this makes an Android TV box an incredibly flexible device to stream content to your TV from the internet or a NAS drive or play locally stored media on the device itself. Many market themselves as Kodi devices, and in the wildest parts of eBay you can find devices that call themselves Android TV boxes that claim to come unlocked or pre-installed with what would normally be subscription channels or free content. However, there are dozens of perfectly legal devices per year and therefore there is nothing illegal about the Kodi platform on its own, as long as you don't use it with add-ons piracy facilitators. If you are concerned about the because your ISP can see your Kodi activity, we strongly recommend using a VPN for your Amazon Fire TV or Fire TV Stick. A good VPN will hide its three-way from its ISP and let it virtually change its location so that its Kodi add-ons work from anywhere. ExpressVPN continues to be the best all-around VPN tested by Date, and it's our top pick for Fire TV Stick and Kodi. Read Next: Our Pick of the Best VPNs What should you look for in an Android TV box? Frankly, it is a chaotic market, with the specifications, features and the proper boxes to change almost weekly. If you buy one of the uncomfortable Chinese boxes, we advise you to look for one with a four or eight core processor, 2GB 4GB of RAM and 16GB to 32GB or more storage - often with a confusing "ROM" role. The 2.4GHz and 5GHz Wi-Fi double band more 4K support are also useful extras, but do not be too enthusiastic about 6K or 8K support complaints: until more TVs and service Streaming support exceeding 4K, they do not have practically meaning and is doubtful that the boxes have the power to process all these pixels. Only one hand-filled of Android TV boxes actually runs what Google calls Android TV - most simply runs a version of Android with the interface focused on TV for the manufacturer's own TV. These last ones may or have no access to the Google Play store and can perform pruned Kodi versions and popular video-streaming applications. In general, the boxes that run TV Google Android TV are more convenient to use and more fiery, although even in these may have problems running Netflix or Amazon Prime without resorting to esoteric rich. If you do not like to get dirty with applications or reconfiguration, we suggest you have an Amazon Fire TV or Nvidia Shield TV device. However, if you are pleased to make an arrangement, you will find some bargains - and amusement - to take the following: the best TV deals from the UK the best android TV boxes. Amazon Fire TV Stick (2020): Flexible, stem and easily available: £ 40 | Buy Now from Amazon OK, a stick, not a box and it looks like your Android in execution, but under the custom interface of the Amazon Fire TV still finds the system Google, and there are streaming applications like Plex in the Amazon appliance store. The same cannot be said of Kodi, but there are ways to download it and install it and a variety of other TV applications by means of side loading or specific downloader applications. The level of entrance Fire TV stick will do a lot, but with only 1GB RAM, a quad-core CPU and 8GB storage, it can feel underpowered. In terms of hardware and software, the 2021 Firestick is identical to its predecessor - the only difference is that model 2021 has a slightly updated remote control with a Channel Guide button and four application buttons that instantly lead to applications like Amazon Prime or Netflix (the specific applications vary from region to region). If you are a plus an enthusiast Kodi, you may want to find the extra for version 4K, which has a faster CPU and 1.5GB RAM not to mention support for go-4K. Also, it is worth looking for the old 4K pendant-style unit, which has a slightly slower processor but doubles the RAM. Many times you can get them second hand on eBay. Main specification: Quad-core processor, 1GB RAM, 8GB storage, 802.11ac Wi-Fi; Operational system: Amazon Prime Video, Netflix, BBC iPlayer, ITV Hub, All 4, Demand 5, Plex; Remote control enabled for voice: Yes; HDR: HDR10, HDR10+, LG No L24.99 Buy now 2. No Shield TV Pro: The latest Android TV box Price: 199 $124; Buying from previous Shield TV's PC Currys was king of the Android TV boxes, but the new Shield TV Pro almost makes him look stubborn. With the new Tegra X1+ processor on board @ 25% faster, while it has a new AI-enhanced upscaler 4K that actually works, improving both the clarity of HD images and the color vibration for a 4K screen. The chip too is dealing with real-time transcoding, so if you have a NAS full of files in different formats, you can transmit them without a Play in support for Dolby Vision HDR, Dolby Atmos and DTS-X surround sound, and a regular AV power. Running the official Google TV operating system, you have access to all the software in the Google Play store. Plex Preinstalled and you can still install Kodi if you want to go hello on Netflix, Amazon Prime, iPlayer and other usual suspects. And although the storage space of 16GB on board is limited, you can always update it using an external USB unit 3.0. The other big selling points. Only Tegra X1+ handle the biggest titles in the Google Play Store, but it will flow games directly from the GeForce service now so you can play through your library of PC games on your TV (provided that the games are supported by the service). For some of Kodi's fans, yeah, exaggeration and the new shield TV is but gets in the way of - runs the same software and has the same x1+ tegra chip. All in all, however, this is the best Android TV package. read our complete review of the Shield NVIDIA Pro for more details Specifications: Core Spec: Quad-Core Processor Tegra X1+, RAM 3GB, 16GB storage, 802.11ac Wi-Fi; Operational system: Android TV on Android 9.0; Ports: Apps Core: Amazon Prime Video, Netflix, BBC iPlayer, Plex, GeForce now; Voice-enabled remote: SimBuy now from Currys PC World 3. TEUREWELL T51: A Sound Overhead for Kodu. price: On Amazon and eBay are filled with compact Android TV boxes built around the same basic specification: an amlogic chipset s905w, RAM GB and 16GB flash storage. Most ships with an identical remote control and run a variant of the same Android 7.1 software. The Tursewell box doesn't do much to distinguish itself from the package, but... reasonably fast, stable and easy to use. The box itself is well designed and surprisingly sound and while the remote has inexpensive feeling Buttons, they are fired more logically than they are at the remote controls you receive with some bargaining boxes. As with all these cheap Android TV products, you will need side apps and may want your own version of Kodi, but with a few adjustments, this is a cheap way to get it and run. Specifications: *Color: quad-core processor, 2GB RAM, storage 16GB, 802.11n Wi-Fi; Operational system: Android 7.1. 2; Main applications: Netflix, Kodi, YouTube, Google Play Movies, Plex; Voice enabled remote: No e27.99 Buy now 4. Xiaomi Mi Box S: The best prayer alternative for Shield TV Price: is 85 $124; Purchase now from Amazon Xiaomiva You are upgraded TV box Android is more lives lives lives lives, lives, lives what's worth more than the mother box Android TV day without a mark. To get started, it runs the Google version of Android TV, which means you have a designed tea interface for use with a remote couch control, plus a good range of applications from the Google Play store. To another, it has Google's assistant and a remote control with voice controls, which means you can search for content or launch an application using only voice and it actually works. Cheers, that you feel trapped by some Android TV boxes, you don't know how unusual that is. Mi Box S as well have built-in Chromecast functions, so that you can launch web pages and applications directly from your tablet or smartphone, although you will have to check that the box and its screen are connected before you start as it will effectively not turn on your TV. Hello. In addition, the support material shall not. It is not widely available in the UK and sometimes may feel a little overwhelmed, but if you want a cheap, meaningless alternative to TV Shield, Mi Box S is the only Android TV box that fits the bill.
