2nd Grade Book Reports

Dear Parents,

Here is the outline for book report #3. For the final book choice, students must choose a biography (story about a real person). Instead of creating a diorama or mobile, students will dress up as their character and present their story as if they were that person. Let me know if you have any questions. Thanks!

*****

Important Dates:

May 1st-May 4th- Book Selection (All books must be approved by Mrs. J)

Thursday, May 31st- Final Book Report Due and Oral Presentations!

Requirements:

Written Report (25 points): 7-10 sentences (2 paragraphs). Proper punctuation, capitalization, spelling, and handwriting will all be graded. Reports should be handwritten on lined paper with an appropriate heading.

Drawings (25 points): Three drawings, each accompanied with one sentence illustrating what happened first, next, and last. Each drawing should be on it's own sheet of paper with the sentence describing what the picture is illustrating written at the bottom. Again, proper punctuation, capitalization, spelling, and handwriting will all be graded.

Creative Project (25 points): Students will dress up as the person they chose to do their book report on and tell their story as if they are that person. Costumes should be as realistic as possible! Keep this in mind when helping your child choose someone to read about.

Presentation (25 points): Final projects should be creatively bound and should include a title page. Students will be required to present their report to the class on Friday, May 31st.

To start with, students studying at mixed schools have more chances to communicate with members of the opposite sex. Are you writing to strengthen your credibility? Therefore, it is clear that more languages generate more employment opportunities. In conclusion, although English as a universal language enables cross-cultural communication, the importance of other languages should not be ignored. Obviously, for most people, the only unconditional love that can be found lies in the family. In this way, I'm sure my message is authentic and clear. You can easily follow their structure, wording and style! Therefore, this book is all about giving you enough examples so that you will have a wide variety of "skeletons" to use in your own IELTS essays. In this way, people will be able to live in a more wholesome society. Argument: Schools should only offer subjects that are beneficial to students' future career success. Consequently, the benefits of single-sex schools are quite limited. In summary, I would concede that single-sex schools have some advantages. According to my observation, visiting another country is a comprehensive experience, which is much more enjoyable than starting at another culture on a computer screen. Now I must explain why I use indented style in this book (by the way, indented style means there are a number of blank spaces at the beginning of a paragraph). Because this book is not hand-written (it is typed), indented style works better here. Get clear on what you want the reader to take away from your book. Why should a customer buy from you? This is not important because life will be easier if there are fewer languages in the world. There is no denying that a young person who is artistic and athletic is more likely to be physically and mentally healthy. In other words, nobody feels in the mood for arts if their needs for public health and education cannot be met. I concede that arts play an important role in our life. To what extent do you agree or disagree? These days, public debate has been going on over whether the government should make tertiary education free for all students, or its affiliates. After publishing my first book 26 Strategies to Succeed in the IELTS Test: How to work hard and work smart, I have received thousands of emails asking me if I can provide more "skeletons" examples. I worked with Meredith Pruden and Heather Westbrook on my editing and design. Specifically, students are able to learn in an organic environment in which boys and girls must know how to interact with each other. Admittedly, single-sex schools have fewer distractions. Lastly, mixed schools provide more benefits **with ** a real-life scenario where both genders co-exist. Then, an individual's self-discipline is the key to better health. Of course, I will also provide some templates for Task 1 at the end of this book. When you are reading this book, I would like you to think about how you can emulate these powerful sentence structures in your own writing. **It is commonly accepted that ** public health and education require more funding than arts. On balance, I would assert that the government would be well-advised to spend more money on public health and education so that the world can become a better place. Argument: Some people think distance-learning can replace schools. A common question since I released my first book, Inside Job, is how I put my thoughts onto paper. Despite that, the government must prioritise areas that require funding. Or, perhaps, you simply want to educate? Do you want them to have greater belief in themselves? It is universally believed that a person's communication skills are of vital importance in the contemporary world; thus, students have to learn communication skills well at school. True, if a young person is able to know what they are really passionate about, they can continue doing what they enjoy in their adult life. In my view, this is a negative trend. It is obvious that depending on children's grandparents for childcare bring about a host of issues. First of all, the expansion of English erodes the cultural identity of other races. First and foremost, ** it provides individuals opportunities to see a different culture first-hand. Thus social networking websites are not helpful in most cases. In the final analysis, despite the fact that socialising online is a popular new trend, it does not help people when it comes to communication, time management and mental health. More importantly, sports, art and music help students strike a balance in their learning at school. Another advantage of schools is that teachers are able to cater for students' different needs in the classroom. Consider this from the point of view of the reader and for yourself too. Having said this, however, parents should still clarify what is more important to them - they need to know how to prioritise their life and strengthen their family ties. Therefore, overall I would argue that grandparents would be ill-advised to assume the responsibility for childcare. When your message is genuine and plain, people more easily connect to it. Some people assert that students in single-sex schools have better academic achievements, whereas many others argue that mixed schools offer students better social skills for their future. Meanwhile, whether this trend has more benefits or more problems is a frequent topic of discussion. **The reason for this is ** if a school only has boys or girls, students would not be distracted by members of the opposite sex at school; hence, they can focus on their learning. I wrote Monday through Friday for a minimum of 30 minutes every day, but you need to find your own rhythm. For instance, when a boy has a conflict with a girl at school, both of them must learn how to cope. Clearly, if students only study English and maths at school, their life will be very boring. It may be tempting to argue that students should focus on what makes them more successful in the future. Discuss both these views and give your own opinion. **In the present age, whether ** single-sex schools provide more benefits than mixed schools has sparked much debate. It is true that childcare is an exhausting job which does not really suit senior citizens. I always begin by brainstorming words, ideas and topics that resonate with me, make me curious, excite me and paint visual pictures in my mind. These may be only simple headlines or potential chapters titles for your book, but it helps build a timeline and structure. If you go down the self-published route, which I did for both my books, it's paramount you have a killer editor. **From my point of view, ** public health should be individuals' responsibility. Individuals are supposed to be responsible for their own health for a variety of reasons. To begin with, individuals know their own health better than others. More exactly, nobody can replace an individual to manage their own lifestyle well in order to improve their health. Nevertheless, translators and interpreters will lose their jobs if more and more languages disappear - this is not good for global economy. Most people argue that it is not helpful for younger generations to prepare for modern life. However, the government cannot do much apart from offering financial support and education in this area. Discuss both these views and give your own opinion. Public concern has arisen about whether the government should provide funding for arts or spend money on public health and education. Nevertheless, e-learning does not offer any other real benefits except its convenience. These are my keys to the kingdom to connect with people and build momentum. Writing a book is akin to writing a business plan. Indisputably, the love between parents and children is the only unconditional love on the planet; therefore, if parents do not spend enough time with their children, it is harmful for children's wellbeing and development. The huge benefit of having an amazing editor is they help with the flow so you can just get on writing. The hardest thing about writing a book is sitting down to write it. Still, sending emails to friends would be a more beneficial option because emails are less time-consuming. Furthermore, subjects like art, music and sports help students to identify their interests and hobbies early in life. This is due to the fact that living in modern society is stressful in terms of work and lifestyle. It is generally believed that looking after public health and education dramatically reduces the crime rate in the society. Mine have typically been between 40-45,000. If you write for 30 minutes a day, it will take you between 4-6 months. Write a thousand words a day, and it will take you 50 days. Write a page a day - 200 days. You just need to find what works best for you. We all have a story to tell, we have all lived a life to varying degrees. For example, some cultures highly value family and education; consequently, if those cultures are lost, many important and beneficial values will also be rendered obsolete, which is not helpful. Granted, life can be easier if people speak fewer languages in contemporary society. Is the book written from a strategic perspective, or are you merely telling a story? Apart from that, public health and education are needed by most people. Besides, too many youngsters spend too much time on social networking websites, which wastes their precious time that should be spent studying. What is the key message of the story you want to tell? What takeaways do you want to give people? I like to write through true stories that have taken place in my life, but I also often use a metaphor to illustrate the point in life, business and relationships. This is true in that honesty and integrity play a pivotal role in modern-day society where trust is the basis of almost everything we do. Or, are you writing to encourage or impact the reader in some way? More precisely, most teenagers spend more time chatting with others online rather than do their homework at home. To be sure, social networking websites also provides young people with the convenience of contacting friends that are far away. Do you think this is a positive or a negative development? People are having a hard time reaching consensus on whether using the Internet to socialise is a positive or a negative trend amongst young people. Others, however, believe that mixed schools provide children with better social skills for adult life. **This is reasonable to the extent that ** some friends may live in other cities, so it is not easy to see them often. It also helps to be open about your own life with all its mistakes and successes - people want to see the human side of you. Once you've spent some time answering these questions and getting clear on your book's objective, it's time to address the structure. It would be wise for parents to look after their own children, which, I firmly believe, is in the best interest of all the parties involved. Argument: Some people think that the government should provide funding for arts. As a result, the ultimate responsibility still lies in individuals' actions. In sum, the government should contribute to public health, but individuals must be responsible for their own health. For instance, Latin is already a dead language now because nearly nobody can speak this language in the world at the moment; therefore, the culture which backs up Latin is also lost. Undeniably, nowadays more and more young people prefer texting each other on Facebook as opposed to speaking to each other in person. In other words, if everyone is sabotaging their own health, there will be more burden for the society, which is not a place that people want to be. Certainly, the government needs to provide sufficient support in terms of improving public health. To what extent do you agree or disagree? Currently, there is a debate about whether schools should only offer subjects that can help students' future career success (i., subjects such as sports and music are irrelevant). One method for uncovering your reader persona is to clip pictures of your ideal audience from magazines and post them in your workspace. **The fundamental reason for this is that ** the mainstream society defines "success" in a narrow-minded way. The primary factor we need to take into consideration is that many students cannot afford university education, although they truly want to get degrees. Take Australia as an example. Once the economy of the host country has been enhanced by international tourism, it would be easier for the local government to implement effective strategies to solve this problem. To sum up, in spite of the fact that international tourism may impede the environment of tourist destinations, the advantages of international tourism surely outweighs its disadvantages. Argument: Some people think that public health is a responsibility of the government, while others believe that individuals should be responsible for their own health. When you write your essays in the IELTS test with a pen, you'd better write without indentations because that makes your essay look longer and it is much easier for the examiner to read your handwriting! I hope this rationale explains my point well! In this book, I will focus on offering you more templates for IELTS Writing Task 2 (the longer essay), especially templates for arguments - these 22 templates are about Task 2 in the IELTS writing test, as Writing Task 2 is way more important than Writing Task 1 in terms of your writing test score. You're reading Entrepreneur Middle East, an international franchise of Entrepreneur Media. Nonetheless, tourist destinations can certainly establish relevant laws and regulations so that this issue can be addressed. Even the best of the best have to make continual improvements to rise above the noise in a world saturated by information. Before wasting even a second writing a single word, really get clear on the purpose of your book. The average book length is 50,000 words. A new way of looking at things? That is to say, the government would be well-advised to allocate resources in a more sensible way. Despite that, mixed schools certainly support students in a much better way. For another, socialising online gives young people fewer chances to practise their interpersonal skills, especially face-to-face communication skills. In the first place, family is always important no matter it is the 18th century or the 21st century. For instance, when you read a sample essay, you can emulate the way the writer writes in your own essay. An illustration of this point would be that traditionally, women are not supposed to be high achievers in the society. Just in case you don't know what a "skeleton" is, the term "skeleton" refers to a template that you can follow as a model in your writing. Did you know, there are around three million business books written each year? That's a lot of books! With that kind of competition, we can ill afford to write a book (or do anything for that matter) half-hearted. To my mind, socialising online is a negative development. There is no doubt that social networking websites have caused more problems than merits. For this reason, I am convinced that socialising online is a negative development in general. Argument: Today, more and more parents depend on their children's grandparents for childcare. I am convinced that schools will keep offering their great value in the future. Argument: Old-fashioned ideas often hold some traditional ideas on the correct way of life, thought and behaviour. **Nevertheless, further analysis could clarify that ** the majority of traditional ideas are still beneficial today. Therefore, we should not abandon all traditional beliefs and values simply because of some old-fashioned components. But further analysis would make it clear that being happy is probably way more important than having more wealth in the long term. On the basis of the above discussion, I believe that subjects such as music, art and sports should be taught in every school, apart from subjects like English and maths. Argument: More and more young people use the Internet to socialise. Do you agree? With the development of modern technologies, the Internet is advancing at an amazing speed in present-day society. However, I disagree with this idea. The disappearance of lesser-known languages leads to a range of issues. In the third place, knowledge gained during overseas trips certainly helps eliminate a range of stereotypes tourists have about the host country. I write my books through my own personal journey, focusing on experiences I've had, mistakes I've made and the blueprints I know work. As a result, you should work on Task 2 more often. But when it comes to whether distance-learning can replace schools, people hold conflicting views. The primary reason we have to take into consideration is that ** public health and education are the pre-requisite of a healthy society. As far as I am concerned, I believe subjects such as music and sports are equally important. Compelling arguments can be made that those seemingly unimportant subjects such as art, music and sports are actually just as important as core subjects like English and maths. Despite that, a more reasonable government funds allocation can solve this issue, for which we can find plenty of evidence from our own experience. In conclusion, I would argue that tertiary education should be paid by the government. This will definitely make your life easier. If you want more inspiration, feel free to visit jadepearlwhere where I share more tips with you in terms of study and success. Argument: Some people think that students in single-sex schools perform better academically. From my own perspective, traditional ideas and values are not obsolete in the present age. Many traditional values and beliefs are timeless virtues that are still strongly relevant today. Personally, I am in favour of the latter view. Convincing arguments can be made that mixed schools provide a more comprehensive learning environment for children. Accordingly, it would be generally advisable for the government to allocate financial resources in a more beneficial way. Argument: Every year several languages die out. During the previous decade, international tourism has produced numerous employment opportunities in various sectors of Australia. Besides, the government is already wasting taxpayers' money on projects such as space exploration by making spaceships - the fund should be spent on university education. If you have further questions or thoughts, you can tweet me @septonmark. Related: 15 Books Every Content Marketer Should Read This Year © 1996-2015, Amazon.com, Inc. Think of it like a business. A renewed focus? **Obviously, ** without enough financial resources, these students have to give up their dreams, which is unfair to them. It is obvious that childcare is probably more than a full-time job which requires a lot of effort and time ** that is to say, ** grandparents who have retired cannot savour their retirement once they have decided to look after young children. Certainly, I would acknowledge that not every couple have the financial ability or the time to look after their children by themselves. In the second place, honesty should still be highly valued by modern people. Shutterstock Since I tend to write from my current experiences and the questions I spend a lot of time addressing, I thought it would be beneficial to share my thoughts on what it takes to write a great book, and how you can write yours. Another problem is grandparents are generally older, which means they probably do not have enough energy to look after very young children very well. It's important to understand the needs and wants of those we're trying to engage in business and in our writing. Why does the world need to hear your story? With so much noise, information and distraction, why does someone need to hear what you have to say? Additionally, international tourism boosts the economy of the host country. A third reason for my belief is that high tuition fees may prevent some students from studying at university. If we want to connect and encourage the human spirit to achieve something and that the money should be spent on public health and education. If the book you write impacts on just one person it was worth the time and the effort to bring it to fruition. Whatever you attach your name to is a reflection of your brand standards. As a consequence, I would assert that languages other than English must be respected, protected and preserved. Argument: International tourism has become a huge industry in the world. In the second place, the disappearance of other languages causes the loss of other cultures. To what extent do you agree or disagree? At the present time, international tourism is a big industry. In other words, children learn how to talk to the other gender at an early age; therefore, their social skills would certainly be fostered. **In this way, ** individuals can expand their outlook and become worldlier. Of course, non-biodegradable litter left behind by tourists **poses a big threat to ** the host country. As a result, several languages die out each year, which is not important in some people's opinion because life will be easier with fewer languages. Knowing your work's purpose is equivalent to it having the desired effect. Who is your book for? Knowing who your reader is in microscopic detail really helps when it comes to your marketing strategy, as well as in creating marketing campaigns via social media or more traditional advertising channels such as radio and television. For one thing, cyber bullying poses a real threat to the wellbeing of young people. The young should love, cherish and honour most conventional virtues and wisdom. To what extent do you agree or disagree? Opinions differ about whether traditional values and ideas held by older generations can help younger generations to adapt to the modern lifestyle. Some people think that the problems caused by international tourism outweigh the benefits.
