The big question is not hard to answer anymore since we have cricket resumed with a hectic season ahead for Team India. With change in guards, India is all set for some exciting cricket in upcoming months with IPL, major ICC events and several bilateral series lined up in 2025 – 2026. India's 2025 cricket calendar is packed with international and domestic action, starting with the continuation of their five-Test series against Australia, followed by hosting England for ODIs and T20s, and a five-Test tour of England in the summer. Domestically, the IPL will feature 10 teams playing 74 matches, alongside major tournaments like the Syed Mushtaq Ali Trophy and Vijay Hazare Trophy. The Indian women's team will also play key bilateral series against Australia, England, and Ireland. India will host two major ICC events: the Champions Trophy in February and the Asia Cup in October, giving them a strong home advantage. Preparations will also intensify for the ICC T20 World Cup 2026, co-hosted by India and Sri Lanka, where India will aim for their second T20 World Cup title. These events position India as both a host and a top contender on the global stage. India will also embark on a tour of England for another five-Test series later in the year. The women's team will play key bilateral series against Australia and England, along with hosting Ireland Women. Additionally, India will participate in marquee ICC events like the Champions Trophy, host the Asia Cup, and gear up for the T20 World Cup 2026. Domestic tournaments like the IPL, Syed Mushtaq Ali Trophy, and Vijay Hazare Trophy also add to the packed schedule. India will host five key series in 2025, showcasing its prominence as a cricketing hub. The year begins with the Ireland Women's Tour of India for three ODIs in January, followed by the high-profile England Tour of India, featuring three ODIs and five T20s from late January to February. India will also host two major ICC events: the Champions Trophy, a 15-match ODI tournament in February, and the Asia Cup 2025, featuring 13 T20s in October. Additionally, the Indian Premier League (IPL), one of the biggest domestic T20 leagues globally, will take center stage in March and April, bringing together top international and domestic talent. These events underline India's critical role in international and domestic cricket. The Indian Premier League (IPL) 2025 will feature 10 teams, maintaining the same lineup as in previous seasons. The Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) has decided to keep the number of matches at 74 for this edition, consistent with the last three seasons, to help players balance their workload. Each team will play twice against the teams in their group, against the team in the same row in the other group, and once against the remaining four teams in the other group. This format ensures a comprehensive and competitive tournament structure.
