Recommendation paragraph example

Recommendation paragraph example for research paper. How to start a recommendation paragraph.

How important are the letters of recommendation in a college application? According to William Fitzsimmons, dean of admissions and financial aid to Harvard, they are "extremely important." If you are a student, examples of great letters of recommendation can help you understand how to get strong letters yourself from your teachers. If you are a teacher, examples in this guide will inspire you to support your students with strength as they apply to college. He continues to read for four excellent letters from teachers who will take anyone to college, along with an expert analysis on why they are so strong. Important note: Are you looking for advice letters? If so, check out my great post here! First, we understand the role of letters of recommendation in your application. Why are Recommendation Letters important? Most admission officers at four years college, especially private schools, stress that their process is holistic. They try to get a sense of the student as a "full person", rather than focus on pieces of those who rely solely on grades and test scores. Since they rarely meet the student in person, the letters of recommendation, along with the student's personal essay, play a huge role in illuminating his intellectual and personal qualities. That is why letters of recommendation from teachers, especially those who know their students well, carry a lot of weight in the applications. A letter expressing a strong support vote, as well as highlighting the impressive academic and personal forces of a student, may have a powerful effect on the chances of admission of that student. Let's take a look at some samples of strong recommendation letters, one from an English teacher, another from a physics teacher, the third from a history teacher, and the final one from a math teacher. Then we will bet exactly why these letters of recommendation are effective. The first example recommends Sara, a senior who loves to write and read poetry. Sample Letter #1: Sara the Poet Dear Admissions Committee, I had the pleasure of teaching Sara in her 11th degree honors the English class at Mark Twain High School. From the first day of lesson, Sara impressed me with her ability to be articulated on difficult concepts and texts, her sensitivity to the nuances of literature, and her passion for reading, writing and creative expression, both inside and outside the classroom. Sara is a talented literary critic and poet, and has my highest recommendation as a student and writer. Sara has talent in considering subtleties within literature and the purpose behind the works of the authors. He produced an extraordinary thesis document all year round on developmentcreative, in which he compared works of three different periods of time and synthesized cultural and historical perspectives to inform his analysis. When he was called to give his defense thesis before his peers, Sara spoke clearly eloquently of his conclusions and answered questions in aGo. Outside the classroom, Sara is dedicated to her literary persecution, especially poetry. He publishes his poem in the literary magazine of our school, as well as in online magazines. She is an intuitive, sensitive and deeply self-conscious individual guided to explore art, writing and a deeper understanding of human condition. Throughout the year Sara was an active participant in our discussions, and she always supported her peers. Her nature and her caring personality allow her to work well with others in a team environment, since she always respects the opinions of others even when they differ from her. When we held a class debate on gun laws, Sara opted to speak on the opposite side of her views. He explained his choice as motivated by the desire to put himself in shoes of other people, see the problems from a new perspective, and get a clearer sense of the problem from all corners. Throughout the year, Sara has demonstrated this openness and empathy for the opinions, feelings and perspectives of others, along with sad observation powers, all qualities that make her outstanding as a student of literature and writer burgeoning. I'm sure Sara will continue to do great and creative things in her future. I highly recommend you enter your degree program. She is talented, caring, intuitive, dedicated and concentrated in her pursuits. Sara constantly seeks constructive feedback so she can improve her writing skills, which is a rare and impressive quality in a high school student. Sara is really an individual who will amaze everyone she meets. Please feel free to contact us if you have any questions at calmeiclemens@gmail.com. Honestly, Ms. ScribeEnglish Master Mark Twain High School This is a complete and bright recommendation for a student who miss Scribe knows clearly well. What other features make it stand out as a strong letter of king? Breakdown Ms. Scribe has a high opinion of Sara and her skills in writing and literary analysis. One way to express it is to use a powerful and specific language. She doesn't say Sara's a good writer. It says it is articulated on difficult and sensitive concepts to the nuances of literature. She calls her intuitive and self-conscious with sad observation powers. These descriptors do not happen by chance. Mrs. Scribe took the time to carefully choose her words, and this effort paid with a strong letter that captures Sara's special qualities. Mrs. Scribe also supports her characterization of Sara with examples. He describes his thesis newspaper and how he answered questions with thought under the pressure of his thesis defense. It gives the example of the debate on arms laws to illustratewill be at many different points of view. In addition to illuminating its intellectual and personal strengths and supporting them with specific examples, Ms. scribe speaks to the goals of will for the future. she emphasizes that youalent in writing, poetry specifically, and who strives to continue to improve as a writer in his future. This letter, by virtue of its formulation, length and specificity, shows that Mrs Scribe took the time and effort to recommend Sara with thought and conviction. The fact that you know Sara well and strives to help her application succeed with a reflective letter adds further weight to her evaluation. This letter would be a boon for the application of Sara, especially if you are applying to study writing or English. He clearly impressed his English teacher and, in return, got a memorable and free recommendation letter for his college application. This next example is similarly enthusiastic and detailed. Sample Letter #2: Stacy the Engineer Dear Admissions Commission It is a great pleasure to recommend Stacy for admission to your engineering program. You are one of the most outstanding students I met in my 15 years of teaching. I taught Stacy in my degree program honors physics and recommended it in Robotics Club. I'm not surprised to find that it is now ranked on top of an extraordinary class capable of elderly people. He has a strong interest in physics, mathematics and scientific investigation. Its advanced skills and passion for the subject make it ideal for your rigorous engineering program. Stacy is a perceptive, sharp, rapid individual with a high attitude to mathematics and science. You are guided to understand how things work, whether they are the old computer hard drives in the school library or the forces that hold our universe together. His last class project was particularly impressive, an acoustic absorption survey dependent on frequency, an idea he said was triggered by not wanting to disturb his parents with his hours of guitar practice at home. She was a strong leader in Robotics Club, eager to share her knowledge with others and learn new skills. I have students from the club who prepare lessons and alternate at our meetings after school. When it was Stacy's turn, yespresented prepared with a fascinating conference on lunar boating and fun activities that have made everyone move and speak. She was our only student to be met with applause very well deserved at the end of her lesson. Stacy's personal strengths are as impressive as his intellectuall's an active, classy presence with a great sense of humor. Stacy is the perfect person to get a group project rolling, but also knows how to sit and let others take the lead. Its cheerful nature and its openness to feedback means that it is always learning and growing as an apprentice, an impressive force that will continue to serve well in college and beyond. Stacy is just the kind of student guided, engaging and curious that helped make our class a lively and safe environment to take intellectual risks. Stacy has my highest board for admission to your engineering program. He has demonstrated excellence in everything he thinks, whether he is planning an experiment, collaborating with others, or teaching himself to play classical and electric guitar. Stacy's infinite curiosity, combined with his willingness to take risks, leads me to believe that there will be no limit to his growth and results in college and beyond. Please feel free to contact us at mlwvmaricfanclub@gmail.com if you have any questions. Honestly, Mrs. RandallPhysics Master Marie Marie School of Curie Miss Randall is clearly a Stacy fan like you're from Mileva Marić. How do you communicate your recommendation? The Breakdown Ms. Randall plugs for Stacy immediately out of the bat with a statement of outstanding ranking. Stacy is one of the most outstanding students he had in 15 years of teaching. A statement like this is quite extraordinary and will have an impact in the mind of its readers. Stacy looks like a special student, and he chose his advisor well. As in the last example, this letter uses a strong and specific language, calling Stacy a perceptive and sharp person who has confidence and good mood to take intellectual risks. Through its precise and expressive language, this letter helps Stacy to live in the reader's mind. In addition to the evaluation, Ms. Randall provides specific examples of Stacy's academic and personal strengths. He talks about his successful teaching in Robotics Club, his leadership in group projects, and his practice dedicated to teaching himself to playing guitar. Rather than spreading the letter too thin, Mrs. Randall highlights some fundamental themes. Connect the love of Stacy's music with his passion for physics by talking about the acoustic absorption project dependent on frequency. All threads join in a beautiful and memorable arch. This letter is a strong support vote for applying Stacy to an engineering program. His physics teacher admires Stacy's abilities and goals, and clarified that Stacy had his highest recommendation in this letter. This next example also comes from a teacher who is extremely impressed with his student. Focusformation of the student in class and his volunteer work outside the classroom. Sample Letter #3: William the History Buff and Social Organizer Commission It is difficult to overcome significant contributions that William Williammade for our school and surrounding communities. As his second and third grade history teacher, I had the pleasure of seeing William give deep contributions both inside and outside the classroom. His school and social service is motivated by a strong sense of social justice, which informs through a nuanced and sophisticated understanding of trends and historical events. I can safely say that William is one of the most thoughtful and motivated students I've ever taught in my fifteen years of school. As a son of immigrant parents, William is particularly attracted to understand the experience of immigrants. He produced an extraordinary biannual research document on the treatment of Japanese Americans in the United States during World War II, in which he exceeded all expectations to conduct Skype interviews with relatives of his subjects to be included in his article. William has a great ability to establish connections between past and present and to establish his understanding of current issues in the context of historical events. He never retires to a simple answer or explanation, but feels comfortable with ambiguity. William's charm for the history of the United States and the world and its ability to analyze in depth makes him an exemplary scholar, as well as a motivated and motivated activist for the promotion of civil rights and social equity. During the year of the second year, William noted that the university design seminars that students participated included little information for first-generation students or immigrants. Always thinking about how institutions can better serve people, William spoke with ESL counselors and teachers of his ideas to better support all students. He helped to collect resources and design a program of university planning studies for immigrant students and without documents to improve their access to the university. He also helped organize a group that linked ESL students with English native speakers, stating his mission to help ELLs improve their English and increase multicultural awareness and social cohesion in the school as a whole. William has identified a need and worked with students and teachers to satisfy him in an extremely effective and beneficial way. Always studying history, he did many researches to support his ideas. William passionately believes in social progress and work for the common good. His personal experiences, along with his deep knowledge of social history, lead his work of advocacy. He is a talented and intelligent student with the charisma, trust, strong values and respect for others to make a great difference in the world around him. I look forward to seeing all the good William continues to do for his companionsin college and beyond, as well as the excellent work that will produce at university level. William has my highest recommendation. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me at thehingstheycarryed@gmail.com. Cordially, Mr. JacksonHistory TeacherMartin Luther King, Jr. High School Mr. Jackson letter makesHe looks like a student and a pretty amazing person. How do you express your admiration for William in this straight letter? The collapse as Mrs. Randall did in her letter. Mr. Jackson provides an exceptional ranking statement for William, calling him one of the most thoughtful and guided students I've ever taught. Considering his long 15-year teaching career, this says a lot about William as a student and a person. As in the last example, Mr. Jackson focuses on some fundamental aspects of William's character. He speaks of his love for history and how he informs his social activism. He comments on his exceptional historical scholarship, as well as his personal qualities to take care of those around him and work for the social good. Mr. Jackson also provides information on William's personal life, explaining how he has a personal connection with his projects and volunteer work as a son of immigrant parents. This letter reveals that William is a reflexive and motivated individual who connects his experiences with his learning and desire to contribute to his community. The letter also shows William's exceptional results by giving specific examples of William's research paper and his work that supports the academic and personal needs of ELL students. Mr. Jackson expresses his enthusiastic recommendation while illuminating William's love of learning and the strength of character. This letter would be impressive and memorable for admission officers considering William for admission to their school. This next example comes from a math teacher. Let's see what Mr. Wiles has to say about Joe. Sample Letter #4: Joe the hard worker Dear fines Commission It is my pleasure to recommend Joe, who I taught in my 11th degree math class. Joe has demonstrated enormous effort and growth throughout the year and brought a great energy to lesson. It has that combination of a positive attitude and the belief that it can always improve that it is rare in a high school student, but so essential for the learning process. I'm sure it will continue to show the same commitment and diligence in everything it does. I highly recommend Joe for admission to your school. Joe wouldn't describe himself as a mathematical person. He told me on several occasions that all numbers and variables make him mad. Joe, in fact, struggled to understand the material at the beginning of the year, but his answer to this is what really struck me. Where so many others surrendered, Joe took this class as a welcome challenge. He stayed after school for extra help, got extra tutoring in the nearby college, and asked questions in and out of class. Because of all his hard work, Joe not only lifted hisbut also inspired some of his classmates to stay after for additional help, as well. Joe has really demonstrated a growth mentality, and inspired his peers to adopt that precious perspective, too. Joe helped to contribute to our class environment as one where everyone can feel supported and able to ask questions. Joe's strong belief in his ability to acquire new skills and improve through practice was probably shaped by his years as a baseball player. He played all high school and is one of the most valuable players in the team. In his final for our class, Joe designed an impressive project by calculating and analyzing the beat averages. While initially he described himself as not a math person, Joe resumed the benefits of his enormous effort and found a way to make the subject live for him in a way he was personally invested. As a teacher, it is incredibly satisfying to witness a student to make this kind of academic and personal progress. Joe is a reliable, reliable, good humor and friend student who supports others in and out of class. It was a pleasure to have in class, and its positive attitude and faith in itself, even in the face of difficulty, is an immensely admirable good. I'm sure it will continue to prove the same diligence, perseverance and optimism that showed me and her peers. I highly recommend Joe for admission to your graduation program. Do not hesitate to contact me with other questions at pertheloveofalgebra@gmail.com. Honestly, Mr. Wiles Mathematics Master Euclid High School While the students present in the first three examples were at the top of their class or showed leadership in the school, Joe is not a top achievement in the traditional sense. However, this recommendation is still strong, although it says it struggled in the teacher's class. What is Mr. Wiles' focus on advising Joe? The Breakdown Mr. Wiles writes a strong letter for Joe, with the same kind of enthusiasm and specific examples of the other three letters. Even though Joe may not have obtained the strongest grades in his math class, he found an enthusiastic advisor in his math teacher. Mr. Wiles was very impressed by Joe's attitude, effort and growth mentality, which he demonstrated throughout the year and inspired his classmates. Mr. Wiles focuses on Joe's substantial personal strengths, those that would probably be impressive for his future educators. Even in a subject who cannot naturally come to him, Joe is diligent and committed. You do not self-consciously ask questions or seek extra help, and maintains a strong conviction in yourself that you can continually learn, improve and acquire new skills. This letter, like others, is effective because it is focused, solidarity and supported with examples. As can be said by these examples, recommendations can communicate a lot about a student. Because of this, they can have a strong impact on the possibilities of admission of a student. So what they canteachers and students to make sure they are sending a strong letter of recommendation that will help their possibilities? The enthusiasm is the key. How to get a strong letter of recommendation While these letters are about different students with differentshare some basic features. One, they look excited and excited. Teachers clearly communicate that they are impressed by these students and eager to help them enter college. At the same time, letters do not go to the sea because they have examples to support their evaluations. Specific examples and stories are fundamental to support evaluation. Also, they make a more interesting and memorable letter. Rather than another engineering candidate, Stacy is the student who sought sound absorption to save his parents from hours of guitar scales. Finally, teachers discuss all the personal strengths of their students, along with their academic strengths. They present the holistic view that admission officers are looking for, along with their strong confidence vote in the future success of students. Teachers should incorporate all these features into their letters, and students should help provide them with the raw material to write about. While students should choose a teacher who knows them well and has stories and observations to share, they should also give their teachers a detailed "brag sheet" and let them know what would go in their ideal letter. This way it can be even more personalized and complete the story that the student is telling in the rest of his application. While counselors may or may not share their letters with students, there should still be opened, two-way communication when the student makes his request. In this way students and teachers can work together to produce an intuitive, enthusiastic and specific recommendation letter to send to colleges.
